TWO OF NATIONALS' STARS ARE TAKING LONG CHANCES

Cunningham and Ainsmith Playing Basket-ball With Semi-pro Teams—Other Baseball Gossip.

By WILLIAM PEET.

When it comes time for the Nationals to report for spring practice next March Manager McLeer may be shy a couple of members of his flock—two youngsters of whom considerable is expected next year.

The men in question are Catcher Eddie Ainsmith and Second Baseman Cunningham, both of whom are clever basketball players and who spend most of their spare time during the off-season trying to shoot goals on well-known semi-professional teams.

Ainsmith is considered one of the best basketball players in New England, and is in great demand. Cunningham last winter played with a team in New York State, and stated at the close of the season he would probably be with them this winter.

Basketball as played by semi-professional teams is nearly as rough as football, and a man is constantly in danger of a broken limb or twisted ligaments. It will be remembered that Barney Dreyfuss put a quetus on Hans Wagner, basketball player, last winter, being afraid something might happen to his star, and the chances are that Manager McLeer, when his attention has been called to it, will ask Cunningham and Ainsmith to cut out the indoor sport this winter.

The Cleveland Americans have never won their league championship, but "hope springs eternal," and the fans in the Ohio city have signed out next year's lineup as resting upon the brows of the Napoleons.

Cleveland has never been a really poor ball club, but there has always been some weakness that prevented the team from winning. The new owner, J. H. Ebersole, is now making a percentage of the club as the dopesters figured that it should stand.

The enthusiasts now claim that the nine has been so built up and strengthened that next season it will evolve itself into the smooth running machine that is necessary to bring home the pennant. Young, Falkenberg, and "No Hit" Joss are the veteran pitchers who will form the nucleus of the box staff, while the team has added to the young twirlers in Kaler, Mitchell, Koestner, and Markness, to say nothing of Gregg, the new left-hander, who is coming from the Pacific slope to try his arm against big league batters.

Land and Smith have proved themselves good men with the mitt and mask, while Adams gives promise of becoming one of the star catchers of the league. In the infield Turner is to return to short, while Birmingham will probably cover the three-quarter sack. This will leave little to be desired at the diamond points. In the outer garden the addition of Jackson has made a great difference and his batting, coupled with that of LaJoie, should put Cleveland high in the club batting averages.

The Chicago White Sox spent a great part of last year in a reorganization of the team. Handill at first, French at second, Purcell at third, and Hahn in the outfield, were all traded or released. Blackburne was supplanted at short, and the end of the season found a practically new team representing the White Sox. The Boston trade strengthened the team greatly and it may be a pennant contender in 1911.

The final line-up was Tannehill or Mulen at first, McConnell at second, Zeider at short, Lord at third, Dougherty, McLean, and Chouinard in the field. With Block or Sullivan behind the plate and Walsh, White, Scott, Olmstead, Lange, or Young in the box, Chicago should prove a hard aggregation to beat.

The University of Notre Dame has representatives on five big league teams. Murray, of the Giants; Burke, of the Boston Doves; "Nig" Reubach, of the Cubs; Beacher, of the Cincinnati Reds; and Daniels, of the Yankees. All acknowledge the Indiana institution as their alma mater.

Many players who break into the major leagues in one position finally make good in another.

With the naming of a president a cut-and-dried affair, it isn't likely there'll be anything like as much excitement at the next annual meeting of the league as there was at the last.

John M. Ward, the only man in the country who could have made any kind of a fight against Lynch, will not run, so that Ban Johnson can hardly have any interest in the election. The American League boss may have something to say at that, for he has a penchant for butting into the affairs of the senior organization at the slightest provocation.

Neither can the drawing up of a schedule offer him a target. The 1910-games idea is as dead as the dodo. It has been suggested that a list of dates providing for four trips around the circuit would be better than one calling for three, but this idea has not been sufficiently worked up to make it probable that it will be adopted for a year or so.

Charley Murphy, by the way, was robbed of his greatest prerogative yesterday, when Mr. Lynch announced that the annual meeting of the league will be held at the Breslin on December 12.

In the past the National Leagues have always foregathered at the Waldorf, and the Chicago magnate was never quite so happy as when he had eight or ten bell-boys paging him there.

SOCCER AT M STREET.
Seniors and Freshmen Play Fast Drawn Battle.

M Street High School freshmen and the seniors of the same school played a fast and furious game of soccer yesterday afternoon, which resulted in a tie, each side registering one goal. Capt. Barnett led a scrappy bunch of youngsters to the attack, and though outwitted by the older boys, his team managed to hold the opponents.

Nutt, of the seniors, was all over, but could not get one past Guard Butler. Russen and Morton were the fortunate ones to score. Master Rayford, Logan, of the second-year class, refereed a good game. Line-up:

work being extended to each. Besides this, it was decided to present Nelisse with the Leigh ball and to give Cox the pigskin used in the V. M. I. battle. The Virginia ball was formally presented to the trophy room, where it will be placed alongside the two other pigskins, which figure in battles with the Orange and Blue, that were presented to the school the night before the Virginia game of this year.

Can Have Captaincy for 1911 Football Team If He Wants It—Insignia Given Out.

In the course of the next few days Georgetown's 1910 football players will get together and elect a captain for next year, and the most logical candidate will be Vincent Dailey, leader of the championship team during the season just closed.

Georgetown's success on the gridiron this fall was due in a great measure to the untiring efforts of Dailey. It was he who suggested and prevailed upon the coaches to coach Coach Nelisse, and he also was instrumental in obtaining several of the new men who turned out to be stars to enter the university.

Dailey made one of the best captains that ever led a Blue and Gray team on the football field, and is sure to be re-elected if he wants the honor. In case he should decline, Skip Wymard would be the logical choice.

At a meeting of the executive council held yesterday the football letters were awarded to eighteen members of this season's varsity squad. This distinction carries with it a sweater and the privilege of voting for next season's captain. Those who received the coveted insignia for the first time are Costello, Furer, Dunn, Walsh, Kelly, Kraft, Hegarty, Bryant, and Joliet. Those to whom the letter was reawarded are Dailey, Cuniff, Fitzgerald, Wymard, Barriello, Sitterding, Feenan, and Carter.

Those who were awarded numerals were Lamberton, Quinlan, Kerwin, Carrian, Jamieson, Stohman, and Vlyman, and Assistant Manager Walsh.

The football report showed that the season has been the most successful in a number of years at the Blue and Gray school, both financially and artistically. The team has already been given the championship of the South by a number of papers, while many of the men have been honored by places on the different picked elevens of the section.

Financially, the year has been very good, and while the expenses were greater than for many seasons past, owing to the building of new bleachers and the outfitting of the very large squad, a good balance has been turned into the treasury of the association by Manager Joliet. Assistant Manager Walsh has already taken up the reins of management and is busy preparing his schedule for the coming year.

Coach Nelisse and Cox came in for their share of praise at the meeting yesterday, a vote of thanks for their good
